no word of American advances nor of fresh developments in any other sector of the huge Allied front.

There was no news of the invasion northwest of Trier since the initial announcement that the Germans were within 10 miles south of Aachen, a Siegfried line stronghold.

The Germans counterattacked, but they were thrown back or held.

A new American army—the Ninth—was disclosed to be fighting in an undesignated sector. The junction of the Third and Seventh Armies was strengthened.

The Third Army, like the first, was knocking at German defenses in multiple threats, any of which might explode into a full-scale onslaught.

Li-Gen. George S. Patton's men had cleared almost all the west bank of the Moselle, and were building a broad bridgehead on the east bank between Pont-A-Mousson and Nancy. The German high command said the Americans were advancing across the upper Moselle toward Lunenburg, 15 miles southeast of Nancy.

Metz was shelled. To the north more heights were won. The Third Army, 10 miles from Germany.

The British Second Army steadily was expanding its breakthrough of the Albert canal in a wedge-shaped attack into Holland. It built up an attack flank within 60 miles of Dusseldorf and Essen. The large Dutch road center of Eindhoven appeared to be a first objective.

Li-Gen. Courtney Hodges' First Army also was almost on the Dutch border, and was within four miles of Maastricht.

The Canadians in the west reached nearly to the Netherlands border after capturing the Bruges and advancing eastward 10 miles to the Leopold canal. Poles in the Canadian Army thrust 20 miles from Gent and reached the Holland. It built up an attack flank within 60 miles of Dusseldorf and Essen. THE STORY: Len and Sue Hughes are entertaining a group of friends at a dinner party. Len is a Swede and Sue is a girl from Chicago. They are both married and have children. The story is a humorous take on the differences between the two cultures.

III
Violet managed to get everything from the pantry to the table and back again without a catapasm; but there was always the unspoken expectation of one. Though Sue had drilled her for hours, Violet still exercised the technique of a lunch-counter waitress at a freight stop, and Sue could not answer the unspoken accusation. It did not escape her that Margaret was also, more or less slyly, reading the maker's autobiography on the service plates, and disapproving of them.

What is sadder than the funeral of a good story murdered in its cradle? A pall fell over the struggle for laughter. The obsequies were interrupted by a violent ringing of the doorbell, a pounding on the door, and a loud voice shouting through:

"Open in the name of the law!" Sue and Len stared at each other in disbelief, then leapt to their feet. Sue gasped:

"Tom! But it couldn't be!" Host and hostess fled into the hall. Violet explained:

"Tom is their son. The last they heard of him, he was in the South Pacific with his regiment. They've been worried sick over him."

There was a hubbub in the hall, a confusion of Sue's shrieks of delight and Len's booming voice mingled with the uproar of an overgrown youth who had spent a year in the hell of jungle warfare, and was a boy again at the sight of his parents. The guests could Further instructions will be given to you by radio and by leaflets dropped from Allied planes."

G. Wallace of Nashville Is Club Speaker

Glen Wallace of Nashville, owner and operator of the Glencrest farms, was introduced by Aubrey Enock as guest speaker of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Mr. Wallace is prominent for his leadership in farming and dairying. He is a breeder of fine cattle, and operates a large peach orchard.

Mr. Wallace used "Agriculture" as the theme of his talk. He said industry was doing much post war planning and since agriculture is one of our largest industries, it is necessary that planning should be made by the agriculturist. He said we have two kinds of farmers—the ones who farm because they know of no other way to make a living, and those who are career farmers. We need more career farmers and farming should be glorified enough to attract fine young men and women.

Mr. Wallace stated that Arkansas has millions of acres of land that has been ruined or damaged by erosion or neglect. Our nation is strong and great because of the richness of our soil. Our people should be educated in the agricultural industry and eliminate dirt and miss methods. He said farmers should think of soil as a place to bank profits.

Olle Olsen, Washington Hogan of the navy, and Brad Shrader were introduced as guests at the luncheon.

It was announced that there would be a Kiwanis ladies night at the Barlow Hotel Monday night, September 18th, at eight o'clock.

Charles Turley, the Kiwanis representative on the Hope Victory Committee, appointed Jim Embree, Emmett Thompson, and Charles Wylie as members of the Property committee for the victory day celebration, and A. E. Stonequist as chairman of the merchants committee.
